Diary of a Wimpy Kid: Double Down is the latest installment in Jeff Kinney’s bestselling series. This book, like its predecessors, has been a huge success, becoming one of the top sellers of 2016. Unlike some of the other books in the series, however, Double Down hasn’t yet been adapted into a film. The story takes place just before Halloween and follows Greg Heffley as he navigates various misadventures, including an attempt to create his own horror movie. Throughout the book, readers are treated to Kinney’s signature illustrations that bring the story to life. The novel focuses on the weeks leading up to Halloween, when Greg becomes convinced that everyone around him is secretly acting and that he is the star of a TV show. He starts behaving in entertaining ways, imagining an audience cheering him on. The book also introduces Greg’s family members, including his parents, older brother Rodrick, younger brother Manny, and best friend Rowley Jefferson. Mrs. Heffley believes Greg is smart but doesn’t apply himself, resulting in mediocre school performance. At a book fair, Greg buys horror novels that inspire him to imagine becoming rich and freezing his body for resurrection. As Halloween approaches, the family struggles with aggressive migratory geese destroying their jack-o’-lanterns. Meanwhile, at school, students participate in the Balloon Brigade, releasing helium balloons with notes asking for return. The student whose balloon travels farthest wins a jar of candy corn. As Halloween approaches, Greg's sights are set on winning the coveted candy corn prize, hidden by his mom. To increase his chances, he writes a heartfelt letter to her and attaches it to his balloon. Meanwhile, he's been researching I.M. Spooky, the author of the spine-tingling Spineticklers series, only to discover that the books are actually ghostwritten. Days later, Greg's balloon is recovered by Mrs. Selsam and her son Maddox, who live nearby. Despite their differences - Maddox has grown up without TV or video games and spends his free time crafting intricate Lego sculptures - Greg tries to befriend him. In other news, Greg's mom announces she'll be returning to school to complete her master's degree, leaving the household chores in the hands of her sons. Greg and Rodrick do their best to avoid actually doing any work. To make matters worse, their pet pig devours Greg's entire stash of candy corn, prompting a visit to the vet, where the pig vomits in Rodrick's van. Greg then becomes sick himself, and after a call from a concerned bystander, the police arrive, thinking the boys are up to no good. After explaining the situation, Mrs. Heffley is left disappointed by Greg's "pattern of deception." Hoping to help him find his footing, she takes him on campus to meet with college students. There, he meets a girl who asks for tutoring in psychology, and Greg studies hard to impress her - only to learn that she has a boyfriend. As Halloween draws near, Greg sets his sights on attending Mariana Mendoza's party, hosted by the popular girl in his grade. To get an invite, he decides to learn the French horn, but his true motivation is getting invited, not actually learning music. Finally, on Halloween night, Greg and Rowley attend Mariana's party dressed as a two-headed "monster." The spooky season kicks off with Halloween games at school, leaving Greg embarrassed, but his friends are thrilled. By November, his French horn enthusiasm has waned, but his dad remains insistent on him continuing to play, citing the importance of perseverance. Come concert time, Greg and Rowley get locked out of the stage room, missing their big moment. This earns them more scolding from home. Greg stumbles upon leftover Halloween candy and, with Rowley, decides to create a horror film inspired by their favorite Spineticklers books. Their movie follows a guy attacked by swarms of gummy worms. Initially, Greg has a grand plan, but reality doesn't quite live up to his expectations. The boys struggle with special effects and an unfinished script, but they do manage to shoot some scenes. However, the geese from earlier in the story return, surrounding their house. Frightened, the boys hide in the basement, only for Rowley to get spooked by a Halloween decoration and climb a nearby tree. After being rescued and featured on local news, Rowley becomes a brief celebrity. Greg proudly claims he'd never act silly just for an audience.
